

Brock Clay Special Education Attorneys Present at Educators Conference in Savannah

On November 11, 2010 Brock Clay's team of special education experts presented to special education administrators from around the State of Georgia at the annual Fall Conference hosted by the Georgia Council of Administrators of Special Education (G-CASE) in Savannah.

"We are excited and honored that G-CASE called upon the expertise of our Special Education team to help special education administrators around the State of Georgia serve students and school districts more effectively," said Nina Gupta, Group Leader for the Special Education practice at Brock Clay.

Brock Clay's experts offered the following training sessions at the G-CASE conference to be held at the Riverfront Marriott.

- "Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act: What It Means For You," led by Nina Gupta, Esq., offered tips and strategies for school districts to successfully navigate the rapidly changing legal landscape surrounding Section 504 protections for students with disabilities.
- "Classroom Observations: When To Say Yes And When To Say No," led by Kristen Williams, Esq., discussed how school districts can protect the integrity of the learning environment while providing access to parents in order to comply with federal and state statutes.
- "Effective Communication During IEP Development," led by Christy Calbos, Esq., offered tips to hold effective and productive IEP meetings, even when all people sitting at the IEP table may not agree.

More information about Brock Clay's Special Education team can be found at <http://brockclay.com/specialEducation.aspx>.

More information about G-CASE and the conference can be found at their website at www.g-case.org.