

American Flag Flown in Afghanistan at Camp Phoenix in Honor of Brock, Clay, Calhoun & Rogers, LLC

Attorneys at Brock Clay are grateful for soldiers flying American Flag on September 11, 2009 in appreciation of care-packages from the firm

On Sept 11, 2009 a small group of soldiers at Camp Phoenix in Afghanistan climbed to the top of Mount Gharib Ghar and performed a small yet very powerful task. As they raised an American flag at the peak of the mountains, the soldiers thought of friends and family back home.

Members of the Combined Joint Task Force Phoenix IX, including Major Kyle Pearson, a former attorney at Brock Clay, have been the recipients of regular care-packages from the Marietta based law firm since the summer of 2009. During a deployment into war-torn countries, any reminders of home provide comfort and the soldiers felt a flag was an appropriate way to show their appreciation.

"We are honored with their service and provided the care-packages only to say 'Thank you' and let them know people at home are thinking of them," said Carol Callaway the attorney responsible for pulling together the effort. "It was an even greater honor to receive this flag knowing the effort they went to memorialize that tragic day."

"We are incredibly grateful to these brave men and women as they place themselves in harm's way," added Managing Partner Scott Gregory. "We would also like to recognize their families, who bear an equal burden at home praying for the safe return of their loved ones."

Brock Clay regards the flag ceremony as an opportunity to publicly recognize the troops engaged in carrying out the mission of Combined Joint Task Force Phoenix IX, and to commend them for their service. The thoughts and prayers of everyone at Brock Clay are with all United States service members deployed overseas and wish them all a safe and speedy return home.
